Who is this guidance for?

This document is intended to provide initial guidance for any member of staff working in an East Renfrewshire organisation who may come into contact with people at risk of forced marriage.

This multi-agency guidance is intended to provide a concise overview of what forced marriage is, the legislation in relation to forced marriage, some of the issues that practitioners' should take into account when dealing with potential cases of forced marriage and the immediate steps practitioners should take if concerned that someone is at risk of or has been subject to, forced marriage.

It should be read in conjunction with the Multi-agency Practice Guidelines: Preventing and Responding to Forced Marriage – update 2014 produced by the Scottish Government and available here:

<http://www.scotland.gov.uk/Resource/0046/00460555.pdf>

Your organisation's procedures in relation to Child Protection and Adult Support and Protection must always be considered. For immediate help and support to inform your assessment you can call:

The East Renfrewshire Child and Adult Protection Committees wish to thank North Ayrshire APC for their support in completing this guidance for local use.

Definition

A forced marriage is where one or both prospective spouses do not (or, in the case of children cannot) consent to the marriage and duress is involved.

Duress can include physical, psychological, financial, sexual and emotional pressure, threatening conduct, harassment, threat of blackmail, use of deception and other means. It is also 'force' to knowingly take advantage of a person's incapacity to consent to, or understand the nature of, the marriage. Duress may be from a prospective spouse, parents, other family members and the wider community. A forced marriage is always an abuse of someone's human rights.

A forced marriage is not the same as an arranged marriage which is entered into freely by both people and families take a role in introducing the marriage partners. Nor is it the same as a sham marriage, where both parties enter into an agreement to marry, e.g. to assist a stay in the UK, and money may be paid to a UK or EU resident to enter into the marriage as a type of illegal 'business arrangement'.

Legislation

Legislation came into force in November 2011 which makes provision for the protection of people being forced into marriage or who have already been forced into marriage.

The Forced Marriage etc. (Protection and Jurisdiction) (Scotland) Act 2011 available to view here:

<http://www.legislation.gov.uk/asp/2011/15/contents/enacted>

The above Act legislated for Forced Marriage Protection Orders (FMPO) which can be granted in the civil courts in Scotland. FMPO's can protect both adults and children at risk.

The provision within the act is designed to enable the courts to tailor the terms of an FMPO to protect and meet the specific needs of victims of forced marriage or potential forced marriage.

For example it might state that:

- The protected person must be taken to a place of safety designated in the order
- The protected person must not be taken to a specified place designated in the order

- The protected person be brought to a court at such time and place as the court specifies
- Any violent, threatening or intimidating conduct be stopped

Forcing someone into a marriage in Scotland is now a criminal offence (under the Anti-Social Behaviour, Crime and Policing Act 2014), which could lead to a two year prison sentence, a fine or both.

Case Studies:

Chloe's Story

Chloe was looking for advice on benefits and told the benefits adviser that she needed to maximise her benefits to help pay for her forthcoming wedding. Chloe has a learning disability and was unable to read and write and has often sought assistance in the past. Chloe was really excited and told the worker that her boyfriend had promised her a new dress to wear. Chloe told the worker that her boyfriend was 'foreign' and he was really excited about getting married, as he will be able to stay in Scotland. Chloe explained that her best friend, who had attended the same special school as Chloe was also going to marry Chloe's boyfriend's friend, who is also 'foreign' and wants to stay in Scotland. The benefits adviser made an adult support and protection referral to her local Social Services department who shared information with the Registrar and ultimately the marriage was stopped. Shortly afterwards, Chloe's 'boyfriend' moved away.

Nina's Story

Nina was a student and contacted the Scottish Domestic Abuse Helpline because she had overheard her brothers talking about a wedding being planned for her. The previous summer, her two cousins had returned from a holiday to see family abroad, both with much older husbands whom they had never previously met. Nina was concerned as the summer holidays were approaching and she felt this would be the time that she would be taken abroad. Nina was very concerned about what would happen to her, but also what might happen to her family if she sought support. Helpline staff contacted the Police from the Public Protection Unit who met with Nina and assisted her in obtaining a Forced Marriage Protection Order. Ultimately Nina felt protected and secure and shared the information about how to obtain a Protection Order with several of her friends.

Prevalence and reasons for forced marriage

Many cases of forced marriage go unreported. Many families do not consider the marriage to be 'forced' and many victims are reluctant to speak out.

In 2013/2014 there were 55 calls to the Scottish Domestic Abuse Helpline in relation to forced marriage. The Scottish Domestic Abuse Helpline confirmed that during 2013/2014.

Reasons for forced marriage

Those who force people to marry often justify their actions as upholding cultural/religious traditions or protecting family honour.

This is misguided as forced marriage is condemned by every major faith. Further reasons can include:

- Controlling unwanted behaviour and sexuality (perceived promiscuity or being lesbian, gay or transgendered).
- Responding to the pressure of others including family and friends and peers
- Achieving financial gain or control
- Ensure care for a child or adult with a disability as carers now unable to fulfil role
- Assisting claims for UK residence/citizenship
- Marrying off older sibling with a disability because their unmarried status is a barrier to marriage for other siblings.

Warning signs and potential indicators

Clearly, the nature of your professional role will present different opportunities to observe or become aware of, warning signs or indicators of forced marriage as the legislation is intended to both stop the course of conduct that would lead to a forced marriage as well as the marriage itself. What is critical is that you appreciate that forced marriage is a real issue in East Renfrewshire and that we all have a responsibility to identify and respond effectively to these types of concerns.

The previous section, which sets out some of the reasons for forced marriage helps to raise awareness of some of the warning signs which are indicative of the grooming process that occurs as part of a forced marriage and some indicators of potential vulnerability to this risk.

For example, disability may increase vulnerability and families who display very controlling behaviour and language towards an individual may pose a higher risk.

The diagram on the following page highlights the key warning signs and indicators that may make you concerned that forced marriage is a risk. Please remember this is not an exhaustive list of signs and that the presence of these indicators is not conclusive evidence that forced marriage is a risk. You must continue to use your professional judgement and make use of the available guidance.

Essential Practice in EVERY case

If you do suspect forced marriage, particular care must be taken around confidentiality; it can be dangerous to involve families, friends or community leaders in any capacity. Do not assume anyone (e.g. the person's mother) will take a protective role. Remember that in some instances, a victim's life may be at stake.

Please also refer to the Scottish Government Guidance including the specific Statutory Guidance (where appropriate) and most importantly the one chance checklist and flowchart within this guidance.

RISKS ASSOCIATED WITH FORCED MARRIAGE

Source: Scottish Government – Forced Marriage Statutory Practice Guidance (2014)

Impact

As a result of forced marriage, individuals may face consequences which can include;

- Sexual degradation and domestic abuse (includes repeated rape, pregnancy and physical harm)
- Additional isolation particularly if the individual has a lack of access to an alternative home or support networks or finances.
- Lack of experience of life outside the home or relationships and as such a lack of skills, knowledge or ability to access or understand their rights (leads to desire to run away)
- Fear – of professionals as this may cause them to be ostracised, family or friends who may try to find them
- Families can report someone missing or falsely accuse them of a crime in order to illicit their return
- Removal to another country or location causing further isolation
- Death by so called 'honour killing'

If an individual has dependent children, they too are likely to be affected by the consequences set out above and this will affect their well-being. In addition, child siblings of those subject to forced marriage may themselves experience some of the consequences outlined above – and may also be at risk of forced marriage themselves.

Girls are at particular risk although it could be a child of any sex or gender identity.

Concerns about children's well-being should be responded to by using your local GIRFEC processes. Concerns about risk to children should be responded to using your organisations child protection procedures.

Protecting children and adults with disabilities

There have been reports of children and adults with mental health needs, learning and physical disabilities and additional support needs being forced to marry. In the case of children, the law is straightforward: children do not have capacity to consent to marriage, irrespective of any disability. This must be considered under child protection procedures and a Child Protection Initial Referral Discussion will apply in all cases.

Some adults do not have the capacity to consent to the marriage and may be unable to consent to consummate the marriage - sexual intercourse without consent is rape. There are various offences under the Sexual Offences (Scotland) Act 2009 that can be committed against a person with a mental disorder.

The Adults with Incapacity (Scotland) Act 2000 can also be used to protect adults who lack capacity to consent to marriage. The Adult Support and Protection (Scotland) Act 2007 places a duty on local authorities to inquire about the well-being of an adult who may be at risk of harm. This would include an adult with physical or mental disability who has been forced to marry, and allows the local authority to take a range of measures to provide appropriate support and protection. In particular, applications can be made to the sheriff for guardianship orders or intervention orders.

There are also sexual offences that can be committed against a person suffering from a mental health disorder under the Mental Health Care and Treatment (Scotland) Act 2003.

Children and young people with additional support needs or disabilities and some adults could be at risk of forced marriage and its consequences because they may be reliant on their families for care, they may have communication difficulties and they may have fewer opportunities to tell anyone outside the family about what is happening to them.

Many of the measures for protecting children and young people with disabilities and adults who may be at risk from forced marriage are the same as those for children and adults without disabilities. However, they may have particular needs, and face challenges which may be substantially different from those encountered by other people facing forced marriage. In the context of police interviews, the use of an Appropriate Adult should be considered to assist with communication.

ESSENTIAL INFORMATION - One Chance Checklist

Staff may only have one chance to speak to an individual at risk of forced marriage and thus, protect them.

DO

- See the individual on their own – even if they are accompanied by others – check in private if the person wishes to speak with a male or female member of staff, never use any accompanying person as an interpreter
- See the individual in a secure and private place where you will not be overheard
- Reassure the individual about confidentiality (in line with your organisation's policy) and explain that you will not give information to their family/ friends or community
- Accept what the individual says
- Explain all the options open to the individual and their possible outcomes
- Recognise the individual's wishes and take these into account
- Assess the risk faced by the individual by conducting an appropriate and thorough risk assessment (in line with your organisation's policy)
- Contact, as soon as possible, the Lead Person responsible for Forced Marriage within your organisation – if you are employed by a Statutory Organisation – your organisation is required to have this (if the individual is under 16 years of age, refer to your organisation's guidance on Child Protection, if they are over 16 refer to your organisation's guidance on Adult Support and Protection) and also contact your local Public Protection Unit (Police) for East Renfrewshire.
- Agree a way to contact the individual safely (for example agree a code word)
- Obtain full details, record these securely (in line with your organisation's policy on confidentiality and record keeping) and pass on as appropriate
- Give the individual (or help them memorise) your contact details and ensure they know the emergency services number for use in an emergency situation and/or give them appropriate agencies contact details (as appropriate to their communication needs)
- Consider the need for immediate police involvement, protection and placement away from the family and arrange this if necessary: this includes any action to stop the individual being removed from the UK
- Do everything you can to keep the individual safe
- Get immediate advice, while the individual is still with you if possible, if you are not sure what to do

If you are aware someone is potentially at risk of a forced marriage and you need to take immediate emergency action in relation to their health or safety, do not hesitate to dial 999 for the appropriate emergency service (Police, Ambulance or Fire).

If Social Services are required in an emergency (outside the normal office hours), contact Emergency Out of Hours Social Work Service on 0800 101 505

DO NOT

- Send an individual away or let them leave without a safety plan and follow up arrangements.
- Approach the individual's family/friends or community unless they ask you to do so and even then use your professional judgement and discuss the merits of doing so with the individual
- Consider approaching community leaders for advice, share information with anyone without the individual's consent unless there is risk of immediate harm to any children (this merits a child protection referral to Social Services), whereby contact should be made with Social Services as outlined and Police Scotland.
- Attempt to mediate with any member of the family, extended family or community.

In all other cases – use the following WHAT ACTION DO I TAKE? - Flowchart overleaf to assist your professional decision making:
